Project Genesis is a non-profit organization that serves children and adults with disabilities. Information about Project Genesis can be found at http://www.projectgenesis.us. The organization is located in Connecticut and was founded in 1991. It serves over two hundred individuals each year and most of them receive long-term educational and life-skill supports. Project Genesis believes that each and every individual with a disability, no matter the severity, has the right to live with the same life experiences as those without disabilities. Also, this organization is extremely focused on individual services which are formatted to fit each person and help them succeed to their greatest potential.

Project Genesis serves adults and students who have any disability ranging from mild to severe. The organization has three different services that provide for the individual in a variety of ways based on his or her disability. The three services Acquired Brain Injury Program (ABI), Special Education Support Services (SESS), and Adults with Disabilities Jobs Program (ADJP). ABI services include independent living skills training, case management, companion supports, and transportation. The individuals in ABI are provided with comfort and reliability so the person and the family can be taught on ways to improve the individual with disabilities’ life. SESS deals with students who have been diagnosed with intellectual disabilities. Programs that are offered through this section of Project Genesis include a variety of skills that will aid the individual to understanding how to apply functional academics, deal with social interactions, access community resources, and deal with academics to everyday life.

This organization seems to be extremely effective in each community in Connecticut. The staff effectively collaborates with individuals with disabilities to make aware they know how to provide for each of them. This organization has great strength for providing for individuals with disabilities and assuring they know how to assess each individual in order to provide them what they need for success. The website is clear and concise when researching to find the benefits of the organization. It is easy to access and is beneficial to those with disabilities and their families. The website clearly states how the organization is open to diversity. Project Genesis treats each individual with disabilities the same regardless of the severity of the disability or the ethnicity and background of the individual. The site is easy to navigate because it has separate tabs for each of the following elements, the about us tab, three tabs for each of the services the organization provides and information about each, an employment tab, and a contact us tab. The website is easily accessed and perfectly designed for people to reach.

In conclusion, I think this site is extremely beneficial. The website of Project Genesis provides detailed information on each of the programs offered through the organization. It is successful in aiding students and adults to find exactly what they are looking for on the website and which category fits them. You may ask yourself, why is Project Genesis best for my child, why is it best for me, or why is it best for my parents? The answer is in the mission statement and that is, “Our mission is the independence of individuals in achieving and sustaining their full range of experiences, rights and desires. Our role in that success is to discover opportunities and to provide training and supports appropriate to the desires and needs of each individual. Read more about our company and beliefs.” I believe this website is beneficial because it shows each part of the organization and why it can help each individual with a disability succeed in everyday life.
