Parent Call on November 28, 2011

A student in my class was repeatedly forgetting his clothes which was really affecting his grade. Since this was the beginning of a new trimester, I hoped to call his mother so he would still be able to build his grade back up. When we spoke, I told her that her son was forgetting his clothes every day. She began to tell me that they were running low on money and were unable to buy the proper gym clothes for the time being. I told her that I completely understood the situation and asked if her son had any extra clothes, not particularly gym clothes, which he could change in to for gym. I told her I would accept any form of clothing that he changed in to but I felt it was necessary for him to change in to something other than his school clothes. When the conversation ended we compromised that her son would start bringing extra clothes to change into for gym, not limited to the Milford PE clothes.
