

CONTENTS.

LIST OF KANT'S WORKS,	Page VII
---------------------------------	-------------

PRELIMINARY DISSERTATION.

Explanation of Terms,	XI
---------------------------------	----

PART I.

I. On the Forms of Phenomena,	XXXVII
II. On the System of the Categories,	XLIX
III. On the Ideas of Reason,	LXXXIX

PART II.

IV. On the Moral Law and Summum Bonum,	CVII
V. On the Falsehood of every other System,	CXVI

KANT'S ETHICS.

GROUNDWORK OF THE METAPHYSIC OF ETHICS.

CHAPTER I. Transit from the Common Notions of Morality to the Philosophical,	1
CHAPTER II. Transit from Common Moral Philosophy to the Metaphysic of Ethics,	18
Autonomy of Will is the Supreme Principle of Morality,	59
CHAPTER III. Transit from the metaphysic of Ethics to an Inquiry into the a priori Operations of the Will,	61
The Idea Freedom explains that of Autonomy,	ib.

	Page
Freedom must be postulated as the Property of the Will of every Intelligent whatsoever,	63
Of the Interest attaching to the Idea of Morality,	64
How is a Categorical Imperative possible?	70
Of the extremest Verge of all Practical Philosophy,	73

INQUIRY INTO THE A PRIORI OPERATIONS OF THE WILL.

CHAPTER IV. Analytic of the PRINCIPLES of Practical Reason,	85
§ 1. Exposition of the notions—PRINCIPLE, RULE, MAX- IM, LAW,	ib.
§ 2. Position 1. Every material principle whatsoever is a posteriori , and so can beget NO PRACTICAL LAW,	88
§ 3. Position 2. All material practical principles , how different soever, agree in this, that they belong to ONE AND THE SAME SYSTEM, whether distinguish- ed or disguised by the names of EPICUREANISM, EUDAIMONISM, BENTHAMRY or UTILITARIANISM, and rest on self-love,	89
Note 1. On the distinction betwixt the higher and low- er powers of Will,	90
Note 2. On the problem—HAPPINESS,	94
§ 4. Position 3. Under what condition MAXIMS and LAWS stand,	97
Note. Contains an example illustrative,	ib.
§ 5. The Will's Freedom demonstrated,	99
§ 6. On the Hypothesis that a Will is Free to assign a Formula for the LAW regulating its CAUSALITY,	100
§ 7. The required Formula found,	102
§ 8. Wherein the Ethical Nature of Man consists,	105
Notes 1 and 2. Of Autonomy and Heteronomy,	106, 108
Tabular View of every possible false System of Ethic,	113

	Page
CHAPTER V. On the a priori Spring of the Will,	116
CHAPTER VI. Farther explanation of the Will's Causal Freedom,	140

THE METAPHYSIC OF ETHICS.

PREFACE,	165
INTRODUCTION,	171-250

PART I. ELEMENTOLOGY OF ETHICS,	251
---------------------------------	-----

BOOK I.

Of the Duties owed by Man to himself.—Introduction,	253-290
APOTOME I. Of the Duties of Strict and Determinate Obligation,	258
CHAPTER I. Of the Vices opposed to the Duty owed by Man to himself as an Animal ,	ib.
(A.) Self-Murder. (B.) Self-Defilement. (C.) Self-Obstupefaction.
CHAPTER II. Of the Vices opposed to the Duty owed by Man to himself as a Moral Being singly,	266
(A.) Lying. (B.) Avarice. (C.) False Humility.
CHAPTER III. Of Conscience: and the Duty owed by Man to himself as constituted his own Judge,	277
Of the first Commandment of Conscience—Self-Examination,	281
EPISODE. Of an Amphiboly of certain Reflex Moral Notions,	283
APOTOME II. Of the Duties of Lax and Indeterminate Obligation,	286
I. Of Physical Perfection,	ib.
II. Of Moral Perfection,	288

	Page
BOOK II.
Of the Duties owed to Others.
APOTOME I. Of the Duty owed to others considered simply as Men,	291
CHAPTER I. Of the Offices of Charity,	ib.
(A.) Beneficence. (B.) Gratitude. (C.) Sympathy,	297
CHAPTER II. Of the Vices contrary to Charity.
(A.) Envy. (B.) Ingratitude. (C.) Malice,	304
APOTOME II. Of the Duty of Reverence,	312
(A.) Pride. (B.) Detraction. (C.) Sneering,	ib.
CONCLUSION OF THE ELEMENTOLOGY.
Of the Union of Love with Reverence in Friendship,	317
Appendix : On the Social Virtues,	322
 PART II. METHODOLOGY OF ETHICS,	 325
APOTOME I. Ethical Didactics,	327
APOTOME II. The Ascetic Exercise of Ethics,	ib.
 CONCLUSION OF THE METAPHYSIC OF ETHICS,	 340
 TRANSLATOR'S APPENDIX.
 On Rationalism and Supra-Rationalism,	 349