

Hello Ms. _____,

This is Stephanie Hofer, _____'s student teacher for Spanish 1b during 3rd period. I am writing to let you know that I am concerned about the success of your student in my classroom. He started off this trimester working hard and doing well. However, his work ethic lately has been slowing down and he is both completing and turning in less work. Today, I gave the students a short project regarding foods in Spanish. I asked all students to write out their idea on paper for me to check before they began their actual assignment. I asked _____ why he was not working and his response was that he knew the words but did not want to write them. I walked past him several times, but within the course of a half hour, no further progress took place. Today was just one example of an uprising reoccurrence.

I wanted to bring you my concern before getting the office involved for being insubordinate. Please let me know if you have any suggestions or comments regarding how I can help your student succeed. When I mentioned to him that he could risk not passing Spanish 1b, he stated that he just wouldn't go here next year then.

Thank you for your time!
